Genesis The Sumerian King List

The above cuneiform inscription is the source of just one of the several versions of the Sumerian King List. Showing in the photo are columns 7-8, and 1-2. (Photo: Cuneiform Digital Library Initiative, University of California) The Sumerian King List (SKL) dates from around 2100 BCE—near the time when Abram was in Ur. Most ANE scholars (following Jacobsen) attribute the original form of the SKL to Utu-hejel, king of Uruk, and his desire to legitimize his reign after his defeat of the Gutians.

Later versions included a reference to the Great Flood and prefaced the list of postdiluvian kings with a relatively short list of what appear to be extremely long-reigning antediluvian kings. One explanation: transcription or translation errors resulting from confusion of the Sumerian base-60 and the Akkadian base-10 systems of numbering. Dividing each antediluvian figure by 60 returns reigns in harmony with Biblical norms (the bracketed figures in the antediluvian portion of the chart).

Final versions of the SKL extended the list to include kings up to the reign of Damiq-ilicu, king of Isin (c. 1816-1794 BCE).

Dates. Competing chronologies for the 2nd millenium BCE are dependent upon the observations of Venus by an astronomer during the eighth year of the Babylonian king Ammisduqa. Astro-historians derive three possible dates for his accession: 1702 (High or Long Chronology), 1646 (Middle Chronology), or 1582 (Low or Short Chronology). The following chart uses the Middle Chronology.

Text. The SKL text for the following chart was originally in a narrative form and consisted of a composite of several versions (see Black, J.A., Cunningham, G., Fluckiger-Hawker, E, Robson, E., and Zólyomi, G., The Electronic Text Corpus of Sumerian Literature (http:// www-etcsl.orient.ox.ac.uk/), Oxford 1998-). The text was modified by the elimination of manuscript references and by the addition of alternative name spellings, clarifying notes, and historical dates (typically in parenthesis or brackets). The narrative was then organized into a chart format to highlight the recurring formal elements: a typical reference to a king's realm originally read, "In Eridug, Alulim became king; he ruled for 28,800 years." Compare this to the first reign in the chart below.

City / Dynasty	King	Length of rule in years
